WHAT IS FAIR IN LOVE AND WAR? THE IMPACT OF NARRATIVES AND FINANCIAL ORDERS

How does the Australian Family Law system hold up to different people's perceptions of 'fairness' across Australia when post-separated couples dividing their assets? Does certain individual differences or language affect how we decide what is 'fair' and 'equitable'?

You are invited to participate in a psychology research project which aims to understand how individual factors, language and story immersion influence perceptions of 'fairness' in Family Law financial matters.

Bring your voice and individuality into this novel piece of research and gain the chance to win a $50 gift card. All Australian adults over the age of 18 are invited to participate and you do not have to have had any prior involvement or knowledge of Australian Family Law financial matters. Participation is voluntary and will not affect your association with the researchers, Central Queensland University, social media platforms or any other organisation circulating this information.
