Interdisciplinary Collaborative Practice (ICP) is an internationally proven method of dispute resolution. It emphasises a team-based holistic approach to resolving disputes and this training will focus on family separation and family law.

We offer three training options:

A two-day training course to help you gain an understanding of the ICP approach, and fulfill the minimum requirements to apply for membership of Collaborative Professionals NSW and the Australian Association of Collaborative Professionals.

The three-day training course is highly recommended for all people new to Interdisciplinary collaborative practice. It includes an extended opportunity to put your new skills into practice through case studies and practical activities, which will assist you to confidently implement ICP in your practice.

Please consult the CPNSW and AACP website for further membership requirements.

We also offer a one-day refresher for professionals already trained in ICP to advance their techniques and network with others.

By participating in this course, you will:

- Understand key roles in ICP and ground rules
- Assess appropriate circumstances
- Facilitate meetings with multiple parties
- Analyse and practice scenarios
- Practice methods for overcoming impasses
- Receive a certificate of completion
